

The Judge Rotenberg Center
Versus
Communication Rights

#StopTheShock

@NeuroClastic

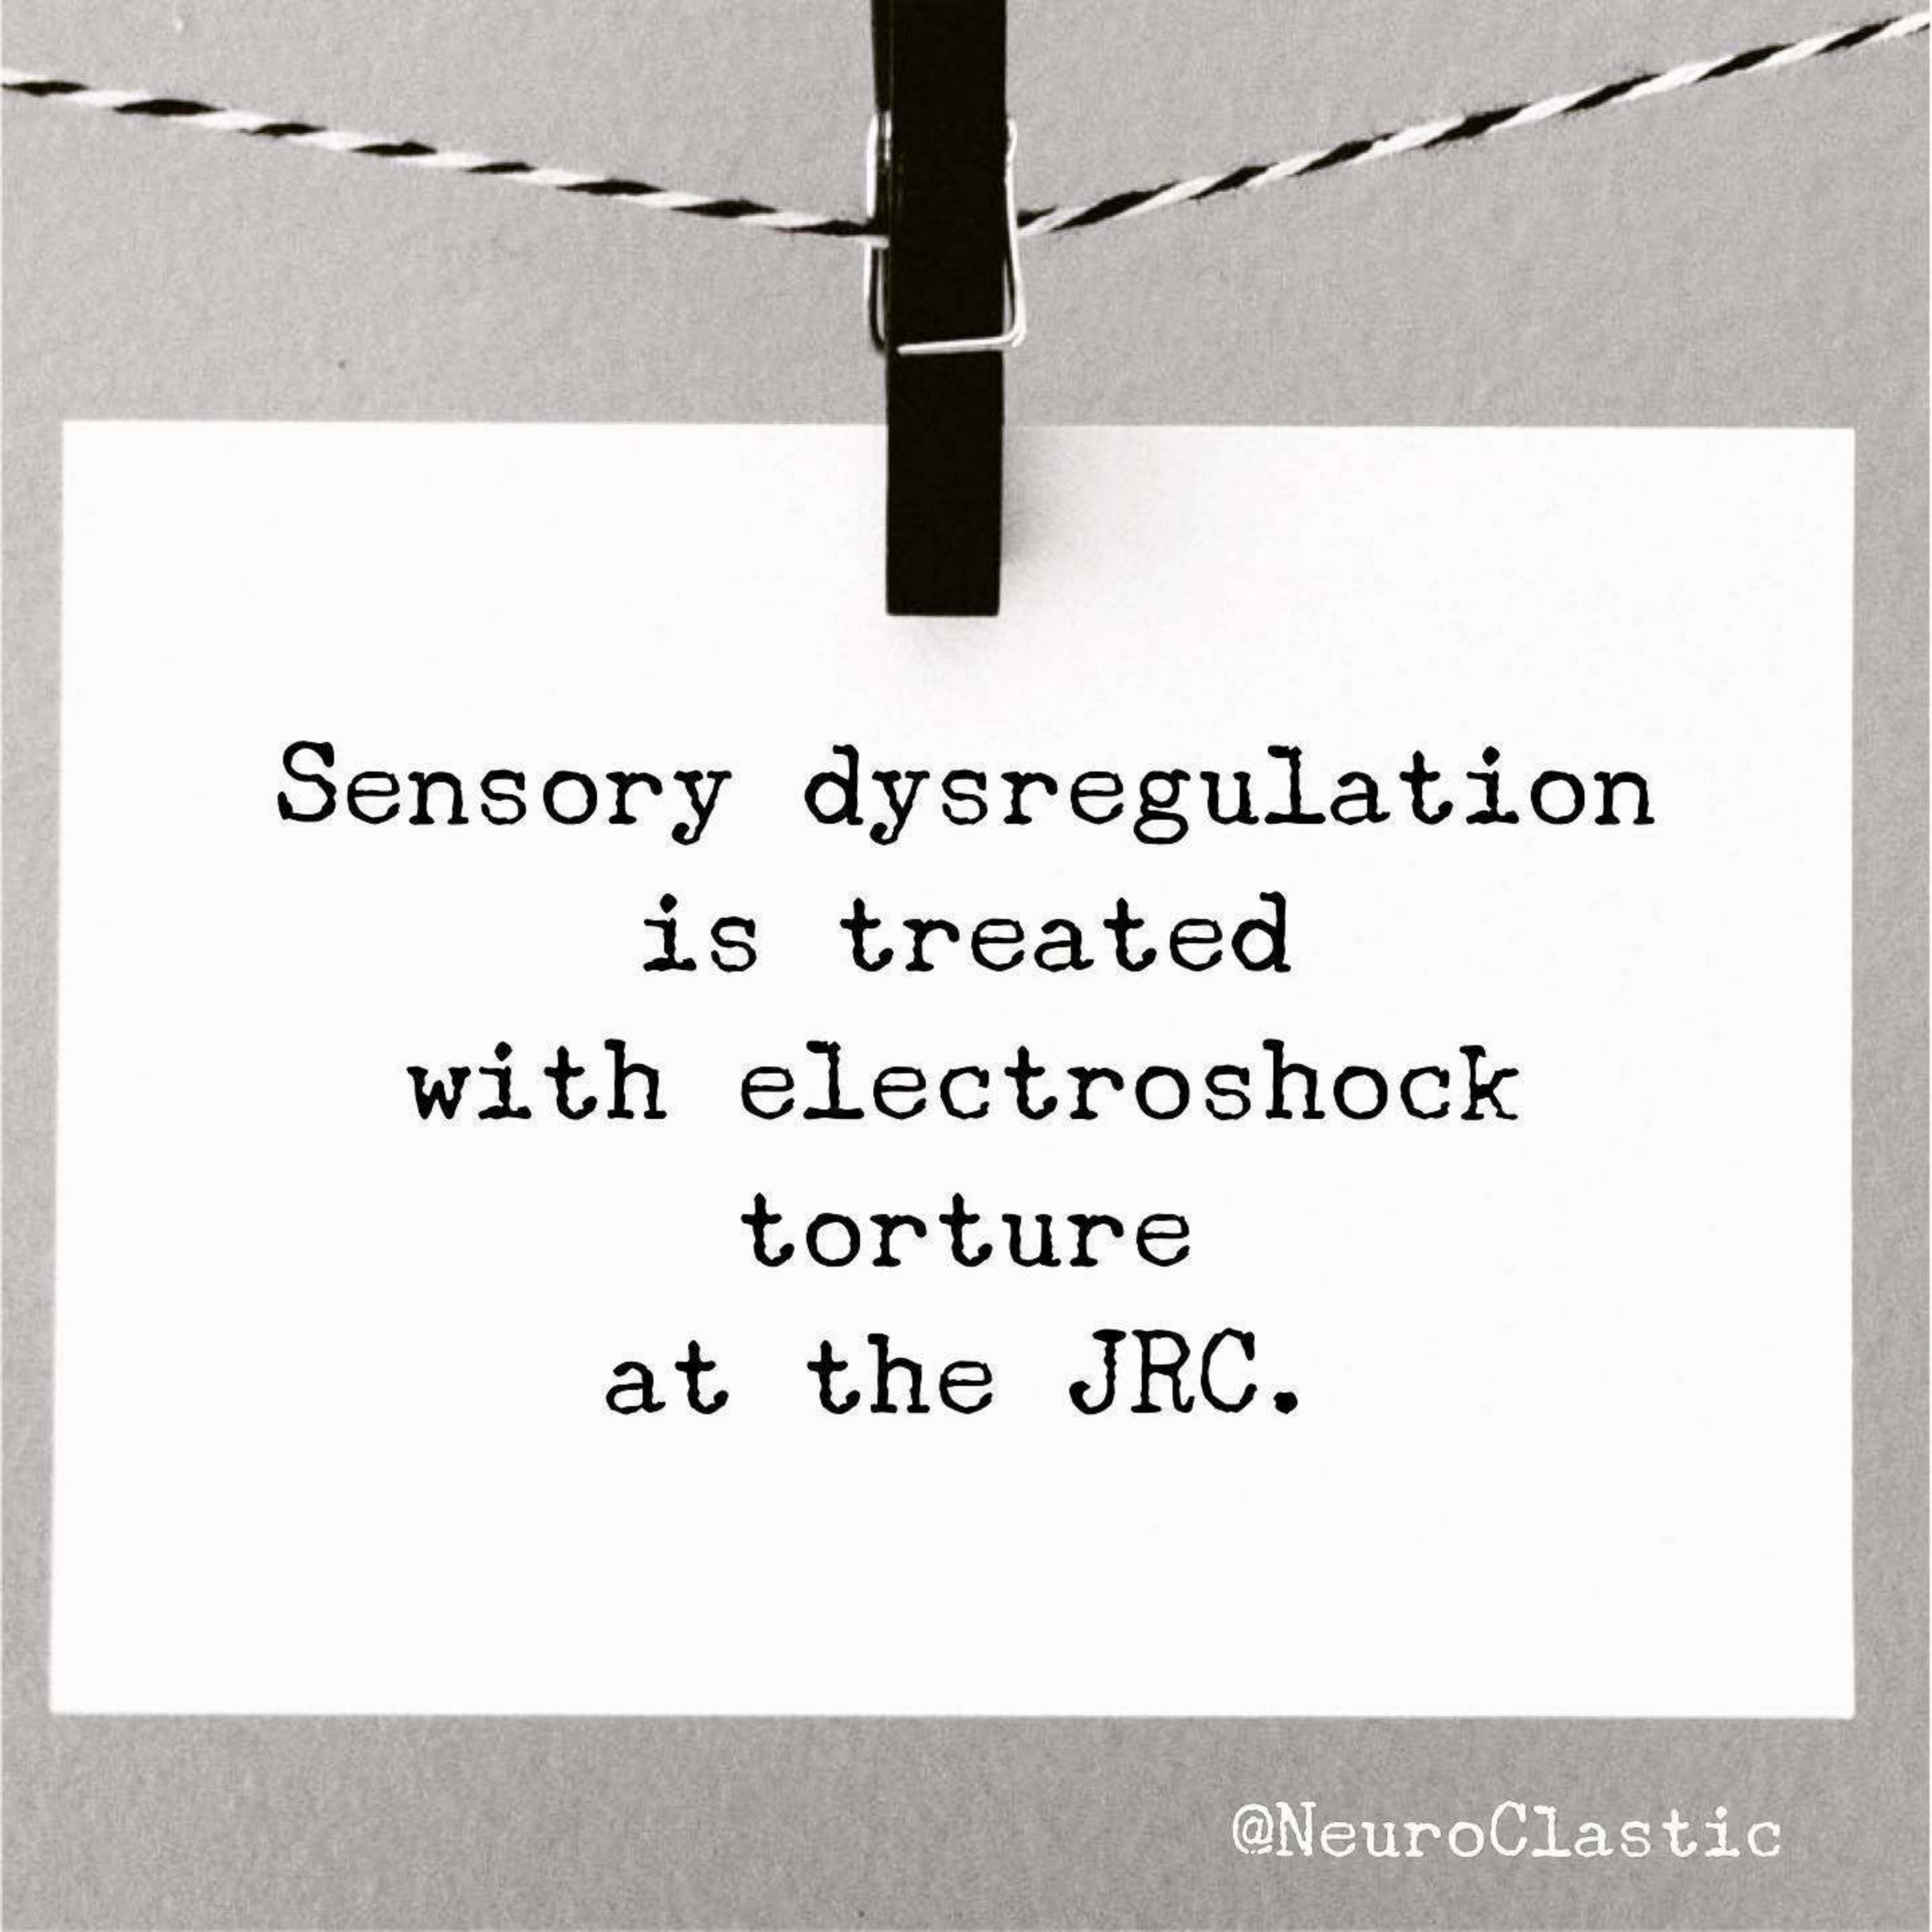

To date,
zero nonspeakers who
have gained access
to communication that works for them have
advocated that they
simply needed to
be tortured with
electric shock
to shape their behaviors.

A black clothespin is attached to a white card, which is held in place by a black and white striped string. The card contains text in a typewriter-style font.

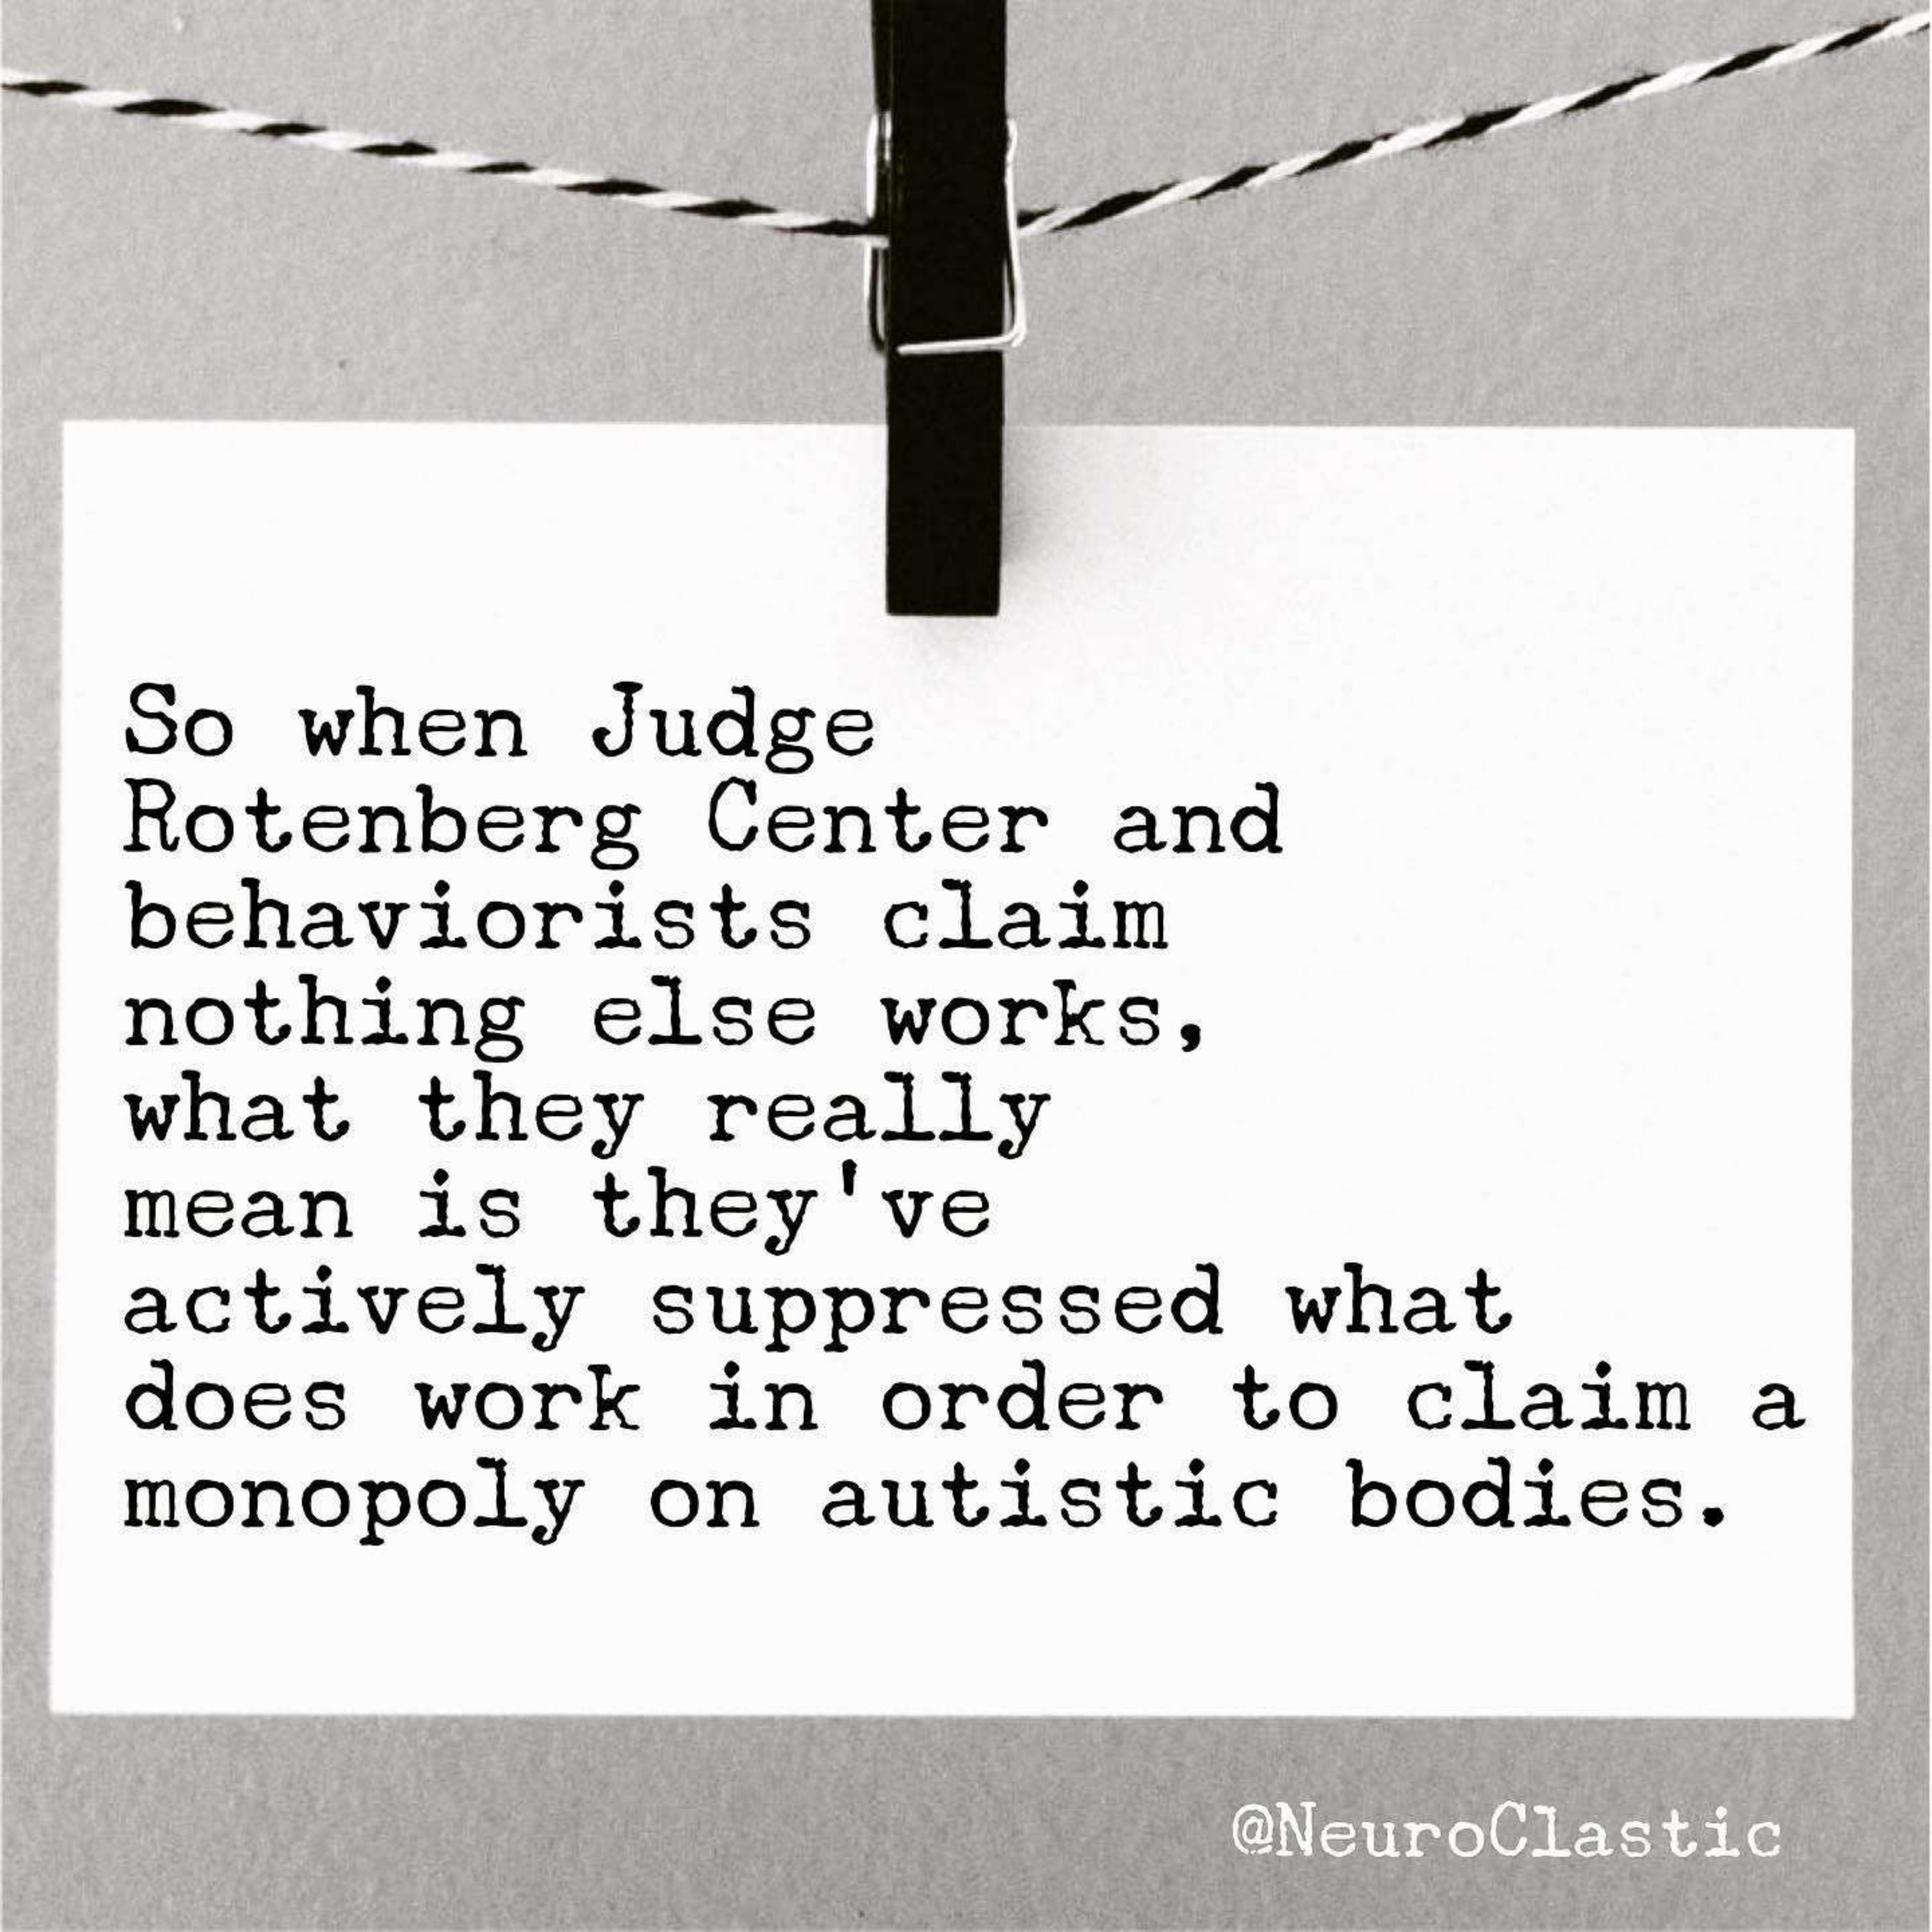

At the cornerstone
of RPM and S2C,
spellers have access to a communication and regulation partner (CRP) who helps them to stay on task and manage dysregulation.
Their sensory
needs are respected
and their competence is presumed.

A black clothespin is attached to a white card, which is hanging from a string. The card contains the following text:

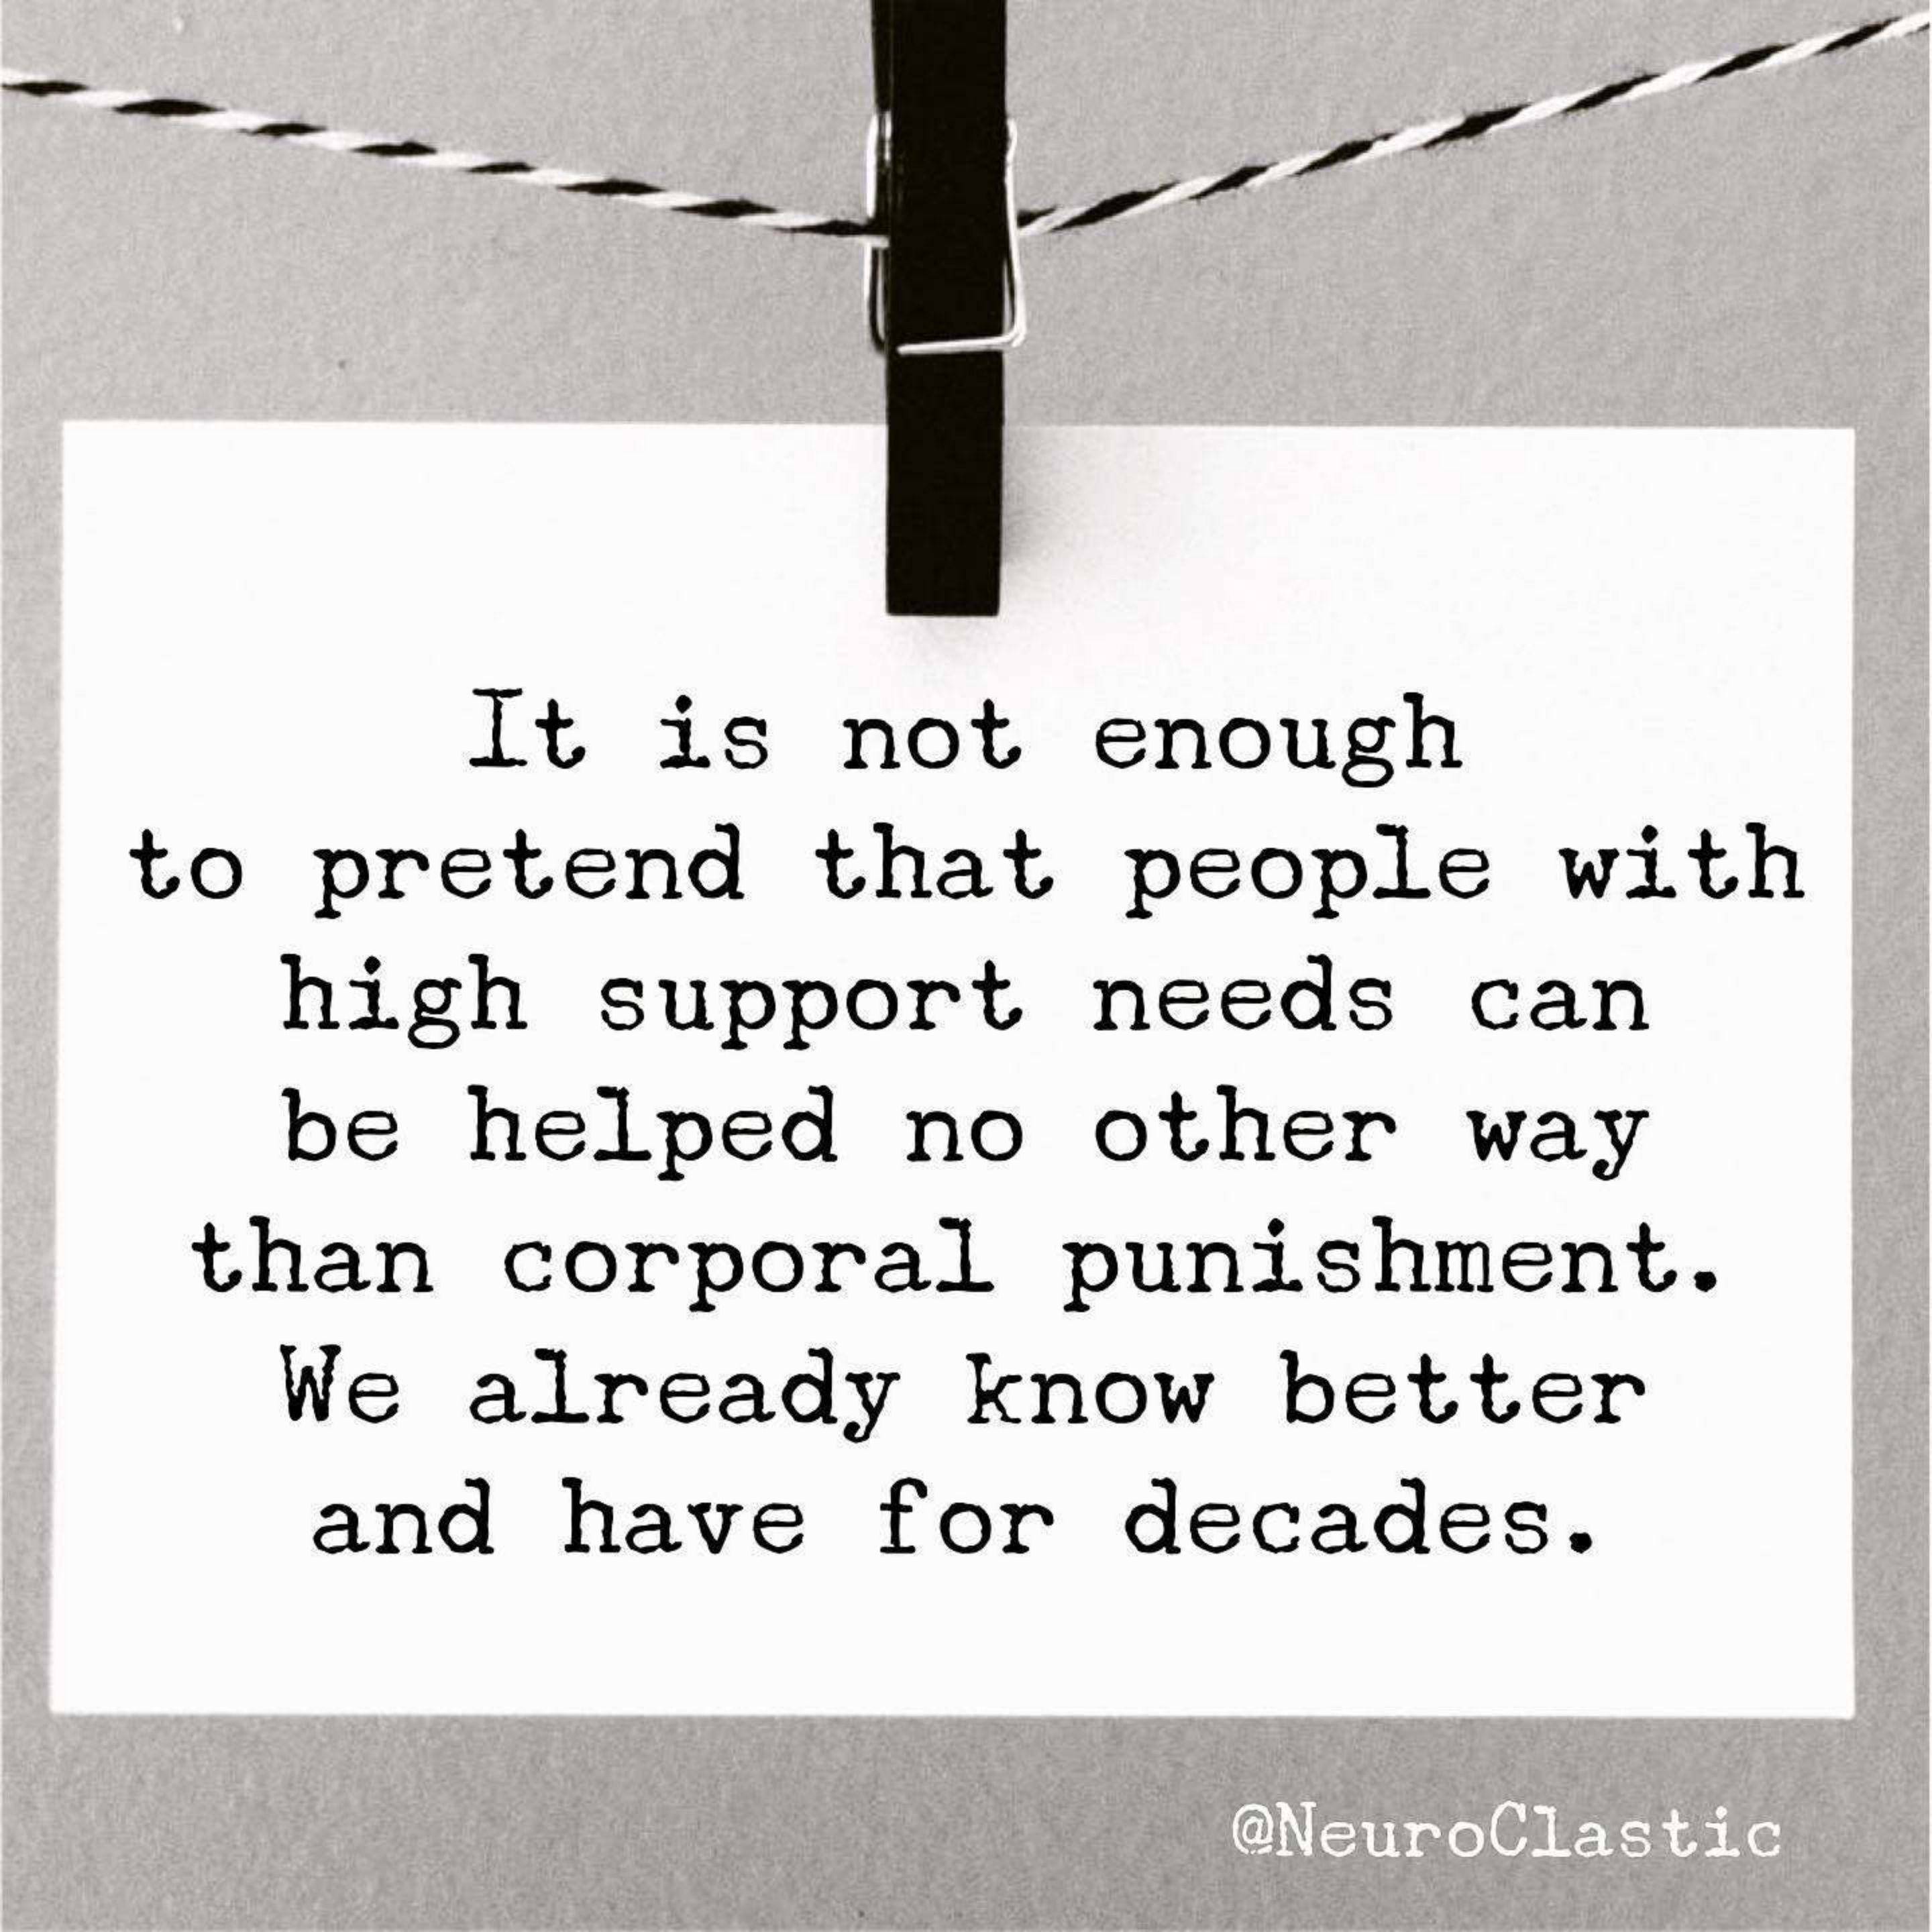

Reliable
communication has
dramatically
improved the quality
of life for autistic
people with high
support needs and
their loved ones.

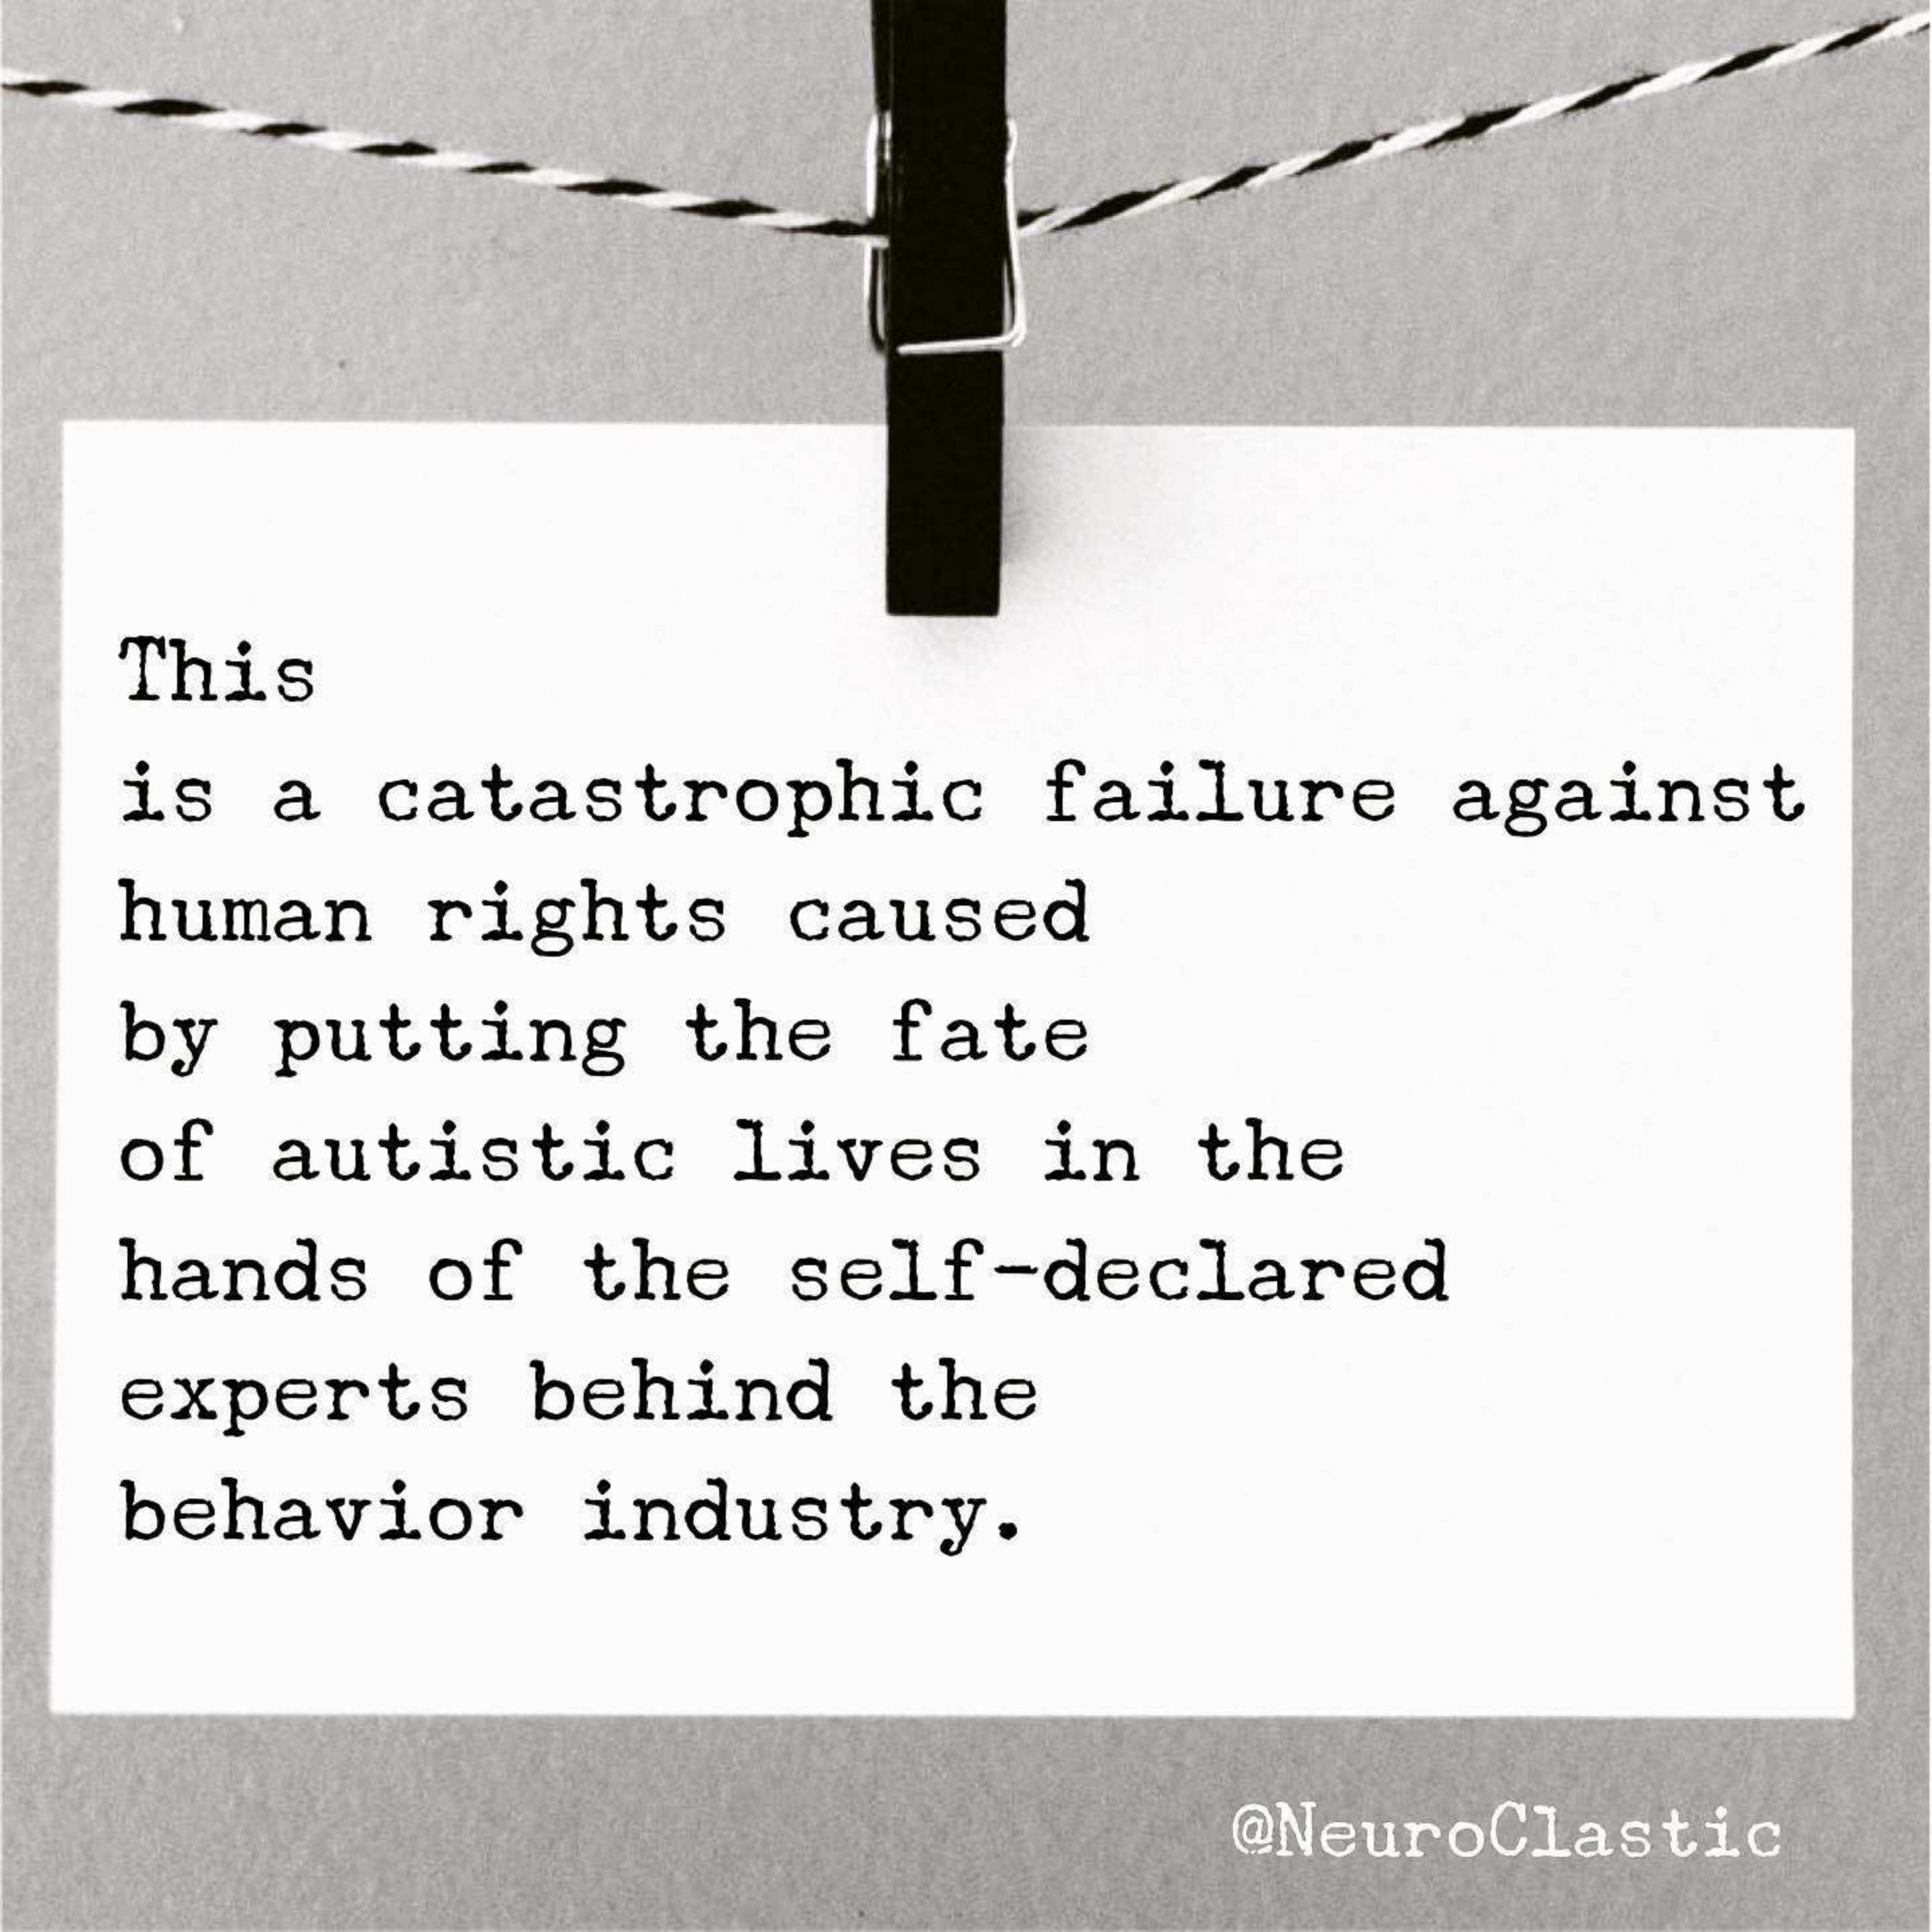

Sensory dysregulation
is treated
with electroshock
torture
at the JRC.

A black clothespin is attached to a white card, which is held in place by a black and white striped string. The card contains a block of text in a typewriter-style font.

So when Judge
Rotenberg Center and
behaviorists claim
nothing else works,
what they really
mean is they've actively suppressed what does work in order to claim a monopoly on autistic bodies.

A black clothespin is attached to a string, holding a white rectangular card. The card contains text in a typewriter-style font. The background is a plain, light-colored surface.

It is not enough
to pretend that people with high support needs can be helped no other way
than corporal punishment.
We already know better
and have for decades.

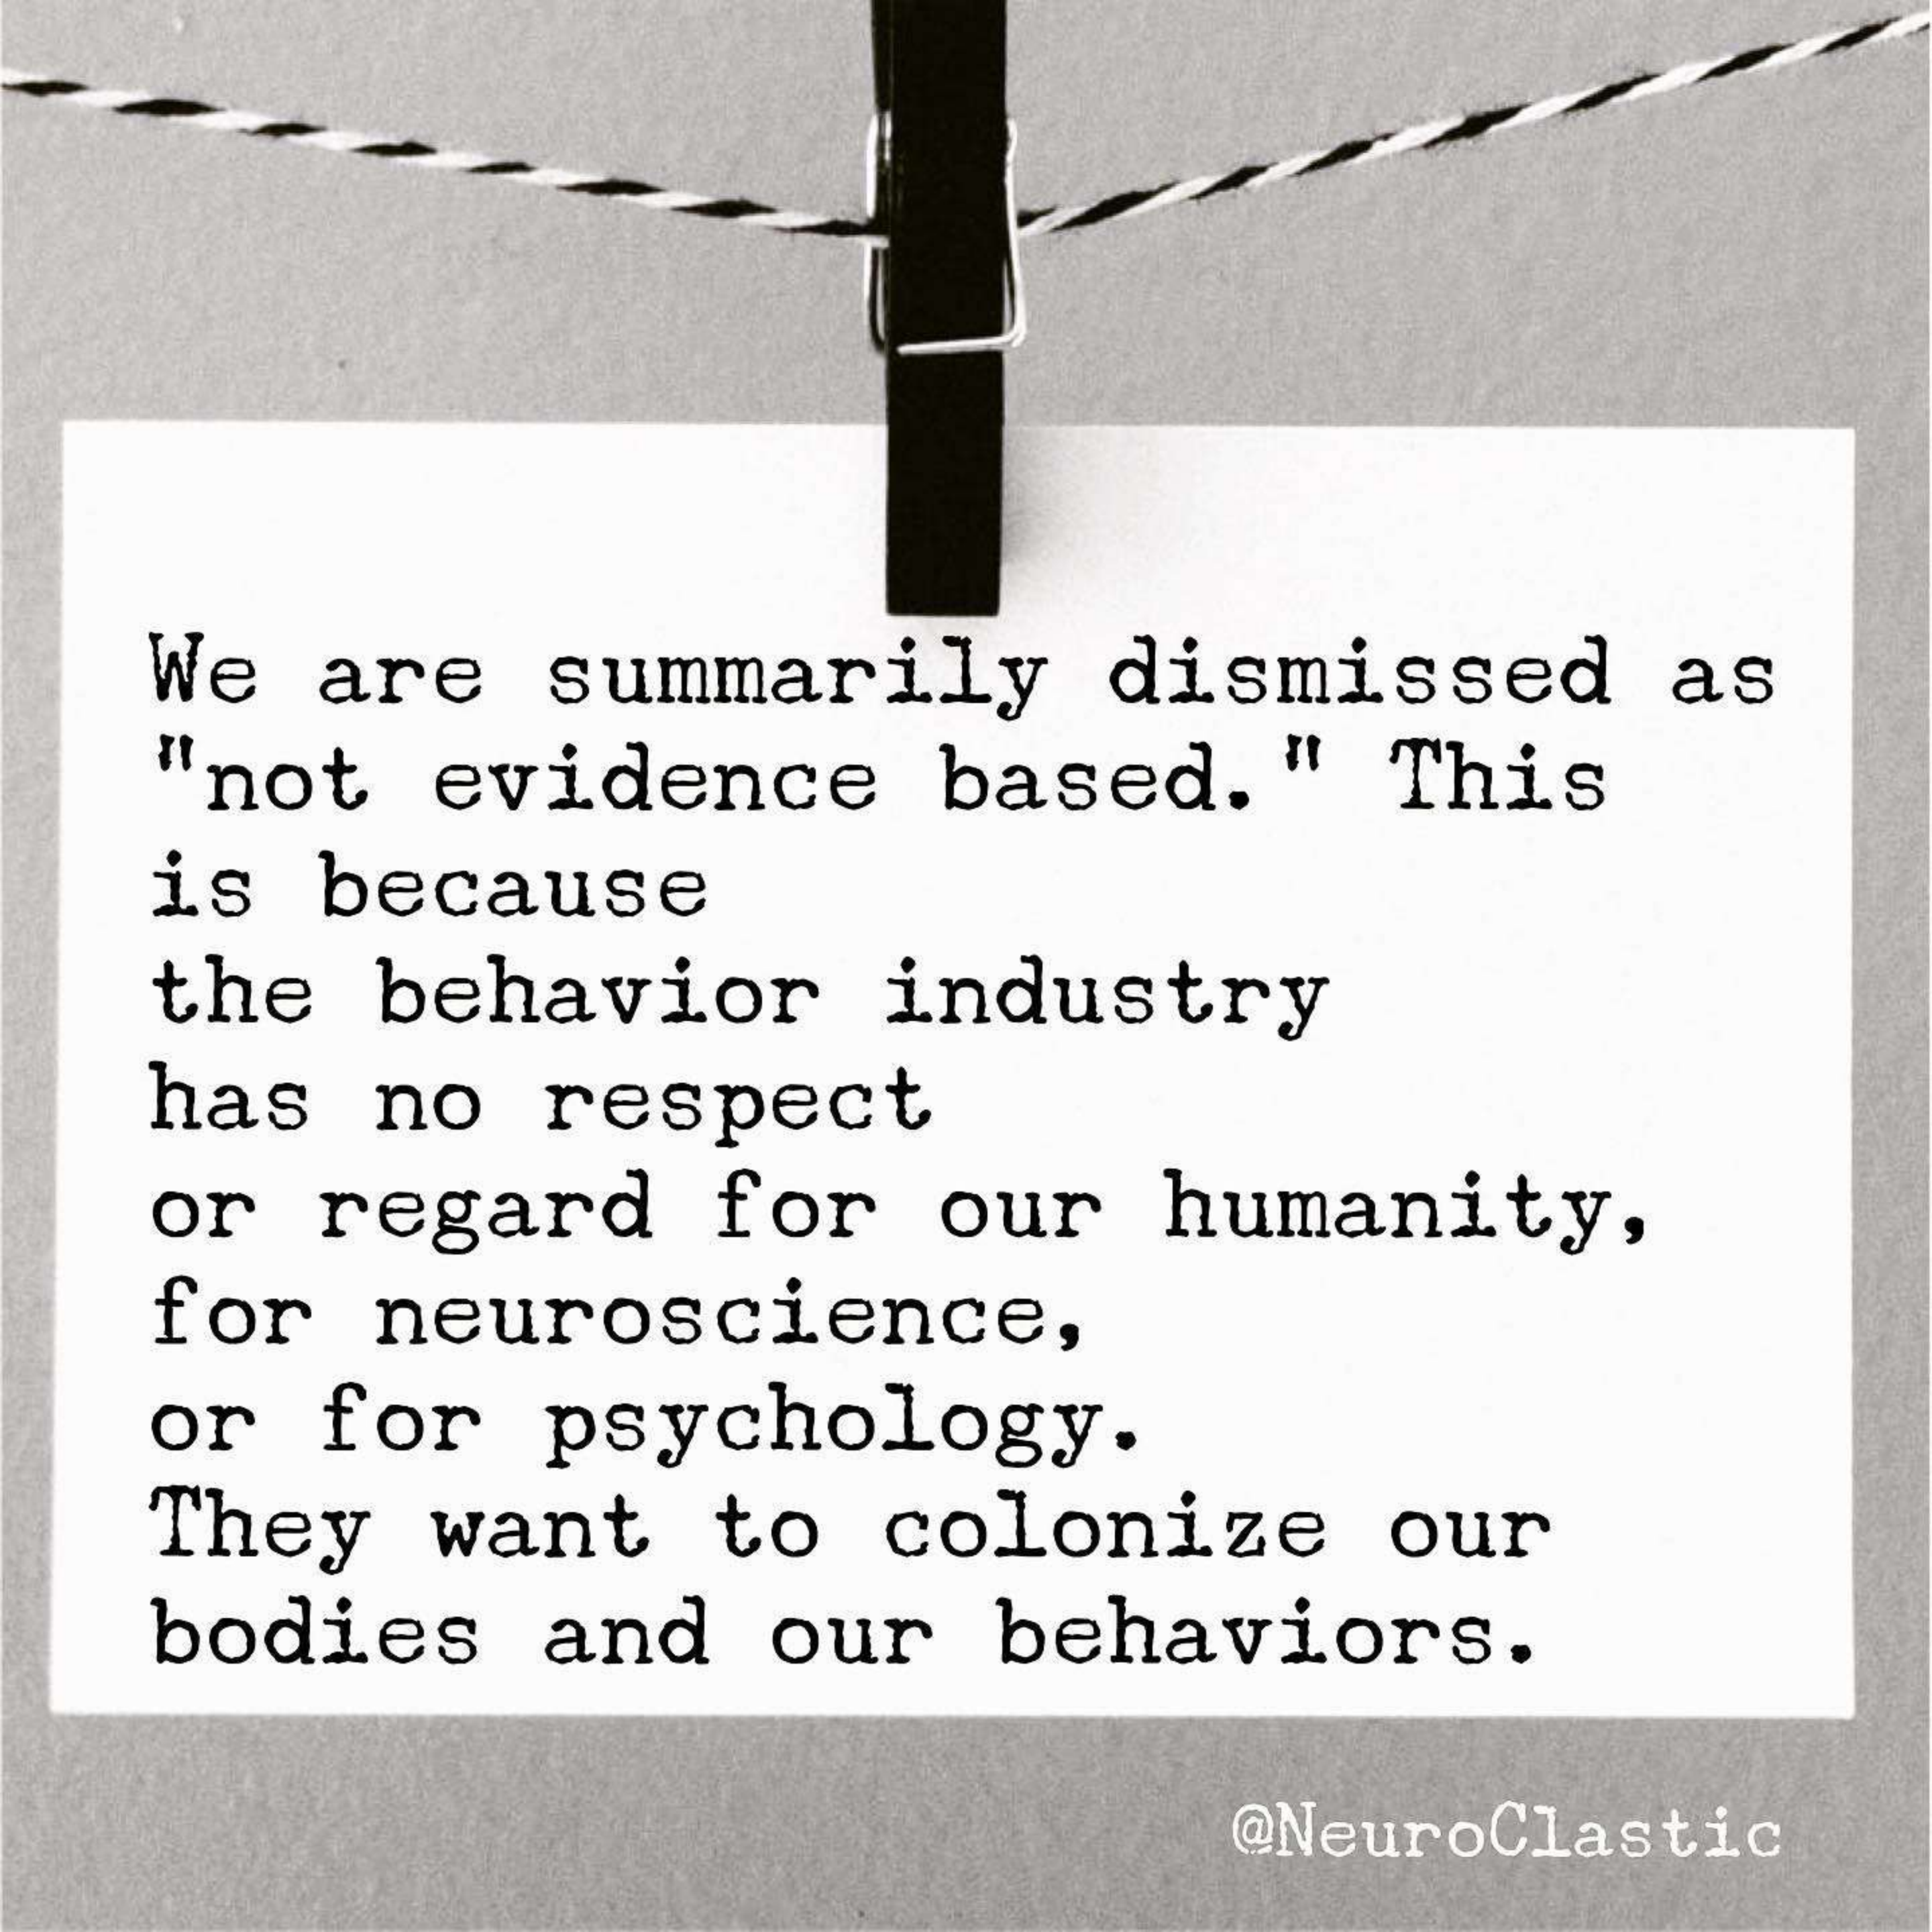

A black clothespin is attached to a black and white striped string, holding a white rectangular card. The card contains text in a typewriter-style font.

This
is a catastrophic failure against human rights caused
by putting the fate
of autistic lives in the hands of the self-declared experts behind the
behavior industry.

@NeuroClastic

The proponents
of shock torture from JRC have argued that they have thousands
of pages of documentation
that were being ignored.
The autistic community
has produced millions
of pages of documentation
that has been ignored.

We are summarily dismissed as
"not evidence based." This is because
the behavior industry
has no respect
or regard for our humanity,
for neuroscience,
or for psychology.
They want to colonize our bodies and our behaviors.

@NeuroClastic